By Theorem 1, $\mathcal{C}_1 = \{x \in \mathbb{R}^n : x_1 = 0\}$ and $\mathcal{C}_2 = \{x \in \mathbb{R}^n : x_2 = 0\}$. Clearly, \mathcal{C}_1 and \mathcal{C}_2 are linear subspaces of \mathbb{R}^n .

that have been a primary concern of the public. The results of the study are consistent with the findings of other studies that have shown that the public is concerned about the safety of food and the environment.

But there were also strong negative influences. Transmembrane domain 171 is essential. Transmembrane 172 is essential. And glycosylation must be kept in the lumen of the pore.

There are several reasons why the current study is important. First, it provides a comprehensive overview of the current state of research on the topic. Second, it identifies the key areas where further research is needed. Third, it provides a framework for future research on the topic.

But, says the American Society for Human Resources, "The fact that the [new] law is a technical amendment does not mean that it is unimportant."

There are two important implications of this finding. First, the finding that the effect of the intervention was not significant in the long-term follow-up suggests that the intervention may have had a short-term effect on the use of the intervention. the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who are obese has increased by 50 percent. In 1990, 15 percent of the population was obese, but by 2000, that number had risen to 23 percent. The increase in obesity is a major public health concern because it is linked to a number of chronic diseases, including heart disease, diabetes, and certain types of cancer. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) estimates that obesity costs the United States $147 billion each year in medical costs and lost productivity.

According to the authors, the results indicate that the use of the new tool can be considered as a positive step towards the adoption of the technology, but the study also indicates that the use of the tool is not yet widespread.

After 1980, the number of people in the United States who were 65 years of age or older increased from 15 million to 25 million. By 2010, the number of people 65 years of age or older is projected to reach 35 million. This increase in the number of people 65 years of age or older is a result of the increase in life expectancy and the decrease in the birth rate.

Long history of use the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who are obese has increased by 50 percent. In 1990, 15 percent of the population was obese, and by 2000, that number had risen to 23 percent. The increase in obesity is not limited to the United States. In fact, the prevalence of obesity has increased in every country in the world, with the most dramatic increases occurring in developing countries. In 1975, only 3 percent of the world's population was obese, but by 2000, that number had risen to 10 percent. The increase in obesity is a global phenomenon, and it is a cause for concern because obesity is a major risk factor for heart disease, diabetes, and other chronic diseases.

By Glen V. Sison
and Tim Korman

MANILA (Inquirer) — A last-minute deal between the Philippine Association of Public Transport Operators (PAPTO) and the Department of Transportation (DOTr) has aborted a planned bus strike that was set to begin today.

The deal, which was announced by PAPTO president Romeo B. Alarcon, allows the association to continue its operations until a new agreement is reached with the DOTr.

Alarcon said that the deal was reached after several hours of negotiations. He said that the deal was a "win-win" situation for both parties.

The deal allows the PAPTO to continue its operations until a new agreement is reached with the DOTr. The deal also allows the DOTr to continue its operations until a new agreement is reached with the PAPTO.

The deal is a temporary arrangement. It is subject to the approval of the DOTr and the PAPTO. It is also subject to the approval of the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE).

The grandpa I never knew

stories and filling a void within.

Fishing. Shooting. Horseback-riding. These were some of the things that my grandfather, the late President Ramon Magaysay, loved to do.

Through the pictures, I have imagined countless fishing trips with him, enjoyed shooting expeditions in the forest of Zamboales where he grew up, and gone horseback-riding in the hot, lazy summer months.

Even in his absence, my childhood was as complete and as normal as that of my cousins and playmates.

Cracking jokes. Bonding with his provincemates. Visiting his folks. The photos show my grandfather at his most relaxed.

Through them, I hear his infectious laughter, share with him a joke or two, and sit with him in comfortable silence on out-of-town trips.

I like to believe I have inherited his sense of humor. Because of him, I was brought up in the virtues of simplicity, value for others, and respect for elders.

Even in his absence, he gave me a part of himself and taught me lessons I will carry with me all my life.

Heroic

Followed. Provoked. Organized. My grandfather was the quintessential war hero.

The sepia-toned photos provide occasion for stories recounted by kith and kin. Reunions and dinners at the home of my Lola Luz (Benson) are incomplete without the mention of his exploits.

Listening, I marvel at the seemingly ordinary chores of the man assigned by his commander to secure and provide medicines, food and other scarce supplies to the guerrilla unit he was serving.

He was their leader, but he was foremost a follower. He was their father, but more than daily provision, he offered emotional comfort and hope.

He had remarkable organizing skills, and was responsible for the thousands-strong Western Luzon guerrillas, famously remembered in 1945 as the Magaysay Veterans Legion.

Even in his absence, I have become a huge fan of his wartime adventures.

Great

Leader. Nationalist. Populist. My grandfather was destined for great things.

The photos are silent reminders of the kind of man he was, and the caliber of the leadership evident in the manner he carried himself before not only his political contemporaries but the Juan de la Cruzes as well.

He was a sight to behold in a he-mag Tuglo—the first Philippine president, I was told, to wear one for his inauguration. In my mind, it was a simple yet symbolic act of connecting with the masses and emphasizing his place among them.

He served native fare and host to his foreign guests to impress on all and sundry his love of country. He had no airs about him, and felt most at ease with the common folk.

He was well-loved, no doubt, as evidenced by the multitudes that mobbed him wherever he went and the mammoth crowd that turned up at his funeral to pay their last respects.

Even in his absence, he is an imposing character difficult to surpass or equal.

Extraordinary

Country. People. Family. These are the things my grandfather valued most.

The pictures convey images of how extraordinary this man was.

As a guerrilla leader, he was instrumental in driving off the Japanese, risking his very life to spare the country he loved from foreign invasion.

As defense secretary, he rounded up the communist Huk, earning him front-page coverage in Time magazine, no less, in 1951.

Whose grandfather was able to do that?

And as President, he went back to being a loving husband and devoted father at the end of a frantic day.

Even in his absence, I feel such a surge of pride in being his grandson.

Endearing

Sincere. Dynamic. Charismatic. I realize now that the photos at my Lola Luz's house radiate his most endearing qualities.

I admire the genuine smile. I am impressed by the boundless energy. I am amazed by the warm persona that drew people to him.

Wherever I go, I am approached by people ready to share a good story or two about him. Interesting, unbelievable, heartwarming, funny even—these are cherished stories by total strangers, passed on to them by their parents or grandparents.

How refreshing to see the smiles on the faces of these ordinary people, whose lives were greatly touched by my grandfather in one way or another.

They treat me like a long-lost family member—an instant alliance that is somewhat familiar and at the same time peculiar.

To them, knowing him at one point in their lives was a blessing.

Even in his absence, people remember his kindness, enduring after the long years that have passed. And, amazingly, they extend that same kindness to me.

I am besieged by pangs of regret for not having been afforded the gift of time to know the remarkable man that was my Lolo Monching.

But thankfully, even in his absence, he lives in me.

Muslim women rap Jingo for remarks

By Rina Dela Cruz
Inquirer Staff Writer

MANILA, Philippines — Muslim women in Manila and other parts of the country have expressed their disapproval of a recent remark made by a prominent Muslim leader, who said that the Philippines is a "Jingo" country.

The leader, who is a member of the Muslim community, made the remark during a public gathering in Manila. He said that the Philippines is a "Jingo" country, which means a country that is full of hatred and violence against Muslims.

The remark was met with strong disapproval from many Muslim women in Manila and other parts of the country. They said that the remark was a insult to their community and that it was a sign of discrimination against Muslims.

The women said that they were tired of being treated as second-class citizens in their own country. They said that they were tired of being discriminated against and that they were tired of being treated as a burden to society.

Butchboy strands 6,000; forces GMA to cancel sortie

MANILA, Philippines — A 6,000-passenger cruise ship, the Butchboy, was stranded in Manila Bay after a fire broke out on board, forcing GMA to cancel a planned sortie.

The ship, which was carrying 6,000 passengers and crew, was stranded in Manila Bay after a fire broke out on board. The fire started in the kitchen area and spread to other parts of the ship.

The ship's captain, who is a Filipino, said that the fire was caused by a gas leak. He said that the fire started in the kitchen area and spread to other parts of the ship.

The ship was stranded in Manila Bay for several hours before it was able to depart. The ship's departure was delayed because of the fire.

Taiwan's Chen wins tight race

TAIPEI, Taiwan—President Chen Shui-bian won a tight election Saturday, a day after surviving an assassination attempt, Taiwan's ruling party claimed.

Taiwanese voted separately on a referendum asking if Taiwan should beef up defenses if China refuses to withdraw missiles targeting the territory and whether to seek peace talks with Beijing. Those results were expected later Saturday.

Fireworks boomed in the night sky as ruling party lawmaker Hsiao Bi-hsin told supporters at Chen's headquarters, "We've proved to the world that we've won. Today's victory is a victory for democracy and a victory for Asia."

Official results were not in, but unofficial results reported by TVBS cable news said Chen squeaked by with about 50,000 more votes than Nationalist Party leader Lien Chan after a cliffhanger of a campaign. A total of about 1.3 million ballots were cast, the station said.

Lien didn't immediately concede defeat, but demanded a recount. "We want to raise a motion to declare the election invalid," he told thousands of cheering supporters outside his campaign headquarters.

"We ask the central election commission to retire and seal all ballot boxes," he added.

On the eve of the vote, gunfire hit Chen in the abdomen and Vice President Annemie Lu in the knee as they rode through the southern town of Tainan, waving to supporters from an open-top jeep.

Neither leader was seriously wounded, and some Nationalist leaders said the shooting helped CHEN casting his ballot yesterday.

AP/WIDE

Chen win crucial ploy votes in the tight race.

"A bullet was fired at President Chen, but it ended up hurting us," said James Hu, mayor of Taichung, Taiwan's third-largest city.

But Joseph Wu, a senior Presidential Office official, said that "there were no sympathy votes." Wu said his party's internal polls showed Chen leading by 2 percentage points before the shots were fired.

The shooting was being treated as a criminal case—not a conspiracy or an attack that involved

China, prosecutor Wang Sen-jung said Saturday. No suspects have been identified.

Earlier Saturday, Chen slowly strode into a voting station in the capital, Taipei, surrounded by bodyguards armed with submachine guns. He walked stiffly, looking worn and worried. He smiled slightly as he dropped his ballot in the box and told reporters that gunshots would never derail Taiwan's democracy.

"It doesn't matter where the bullet came from, A-bian won't be struck down," Chen said, referring to himself by his nickname. "And even if I were struck down, this could not strike down the aspirations of Taiwan's 23 million people for democracy and liberty."

After he voted, Lien, an ex-vice president, urged voters not to be swayed by their emotions. "We must be brave and calm," he said.

Chinese leaders have denounced the referendum, which they fear is a rehearsal for a vote on Taiwanese independence. The two sides split when the communists took over the Chinese mainland in 1949. Beijing wants Taiwan to remain the mainland and has threatened to attack if Taiwan seeks a permanent split. AP/WIDE

1. The first step is to identify the key components of the system. This involves understanding the hardware and software involved, as well as the data flow and the interactions between different parts of the system.

2. The second step is to define the requirements for the system. This includes identifying the functional requirements, the performance requirements, and the security requirements.

3. The third step is to design the system architecture. This involves creating a high-level overview of the system, showing the main components and how they are connected.

4. The fourth step is to implement the system. This involves writing the code, configuring the hardware, and testing the system to ensure it meets the requirements.

5. The fifth step is to maintain the system. This involves monitoring the system for problems, updating the software, and replacing hardware components as needed.

Voters view presidential platforms (3)

With the presidential election just around the corner, many voters are looking for a way to get a better understanding of the candidates' platforms. One way to do this is by attending a town hall meeting. These meetings are held in various locations across the country, and they provide a chance for voters to hear from the candidates and ask them questions. This is a great opportunity for voters to get a better understanding of the candidates' platforms and to make a more informed decision when they go to the polls.

No painless withdrawal of troops is involved

By David M. Phillips

While the war in Iraq has been going on for over three years, many people are still wondering when the troops will be withdrawn. The answer is that there is no painless withdrawal of troops involved. The war in Iraq is a complex issue, and it will take time to resolve. The United States has a responsibility to protect its interests in the region, and it will continue to support the coalition forces in Iraq.

All are for U.S.
troop commitments

By David M. Phillips

In a recent town hall meeting, three candidates for the White House were asked about their plans for the war in Iraq. All three candidates agreed that the United States has a responsibility to protect its interests in the region, and they all agreed that the troops should remain in Iraq for the foreseeable future. This shows that there is a consensus among the candidates that the war in Iraq is a long-term commitment, and it will take time to resolve.
